Socialist Party Facing Serious Task And Test In St. Louis Emergency Convention

By J. L. ENGDAHL.

That is what confronts the American Socialist Party here in its emergency convention assembled as the war clouds grow thicker and blacker and the demand for conscription follows quick on the declaration of a state of war with Germany.

address delivered by Morris Hillquit in opening Emergency National Convention of Socialist Party in St. Louis, Mo.:

Comrades, I thank you most heartily for the honor you have conferred on me in choosing me as Chairman of this Sixth' National Convention of the Socialist Party. At no time has the national council of our party met under as critical conditions or faced as serious a task and test as those we are facing here today.

When the chairman's gavel fell upon our last convention on May 18, 1912, our organization was flushed and conscious of youthful vigor. Our movement was bouyant with enthusiasm, and the men and women in it were joyous with struggle, conscious of conquest. Within a few years, we had increased our membership to over 125,000, represented by about 5,000 live and active locals. We had increased our press to about 300 different organs. We had just had our first great electoral victories in various cities of the country and in legislative bodies, and we had just opened the doors of the National Congress to a representative of our party. Socialism seemed to be in the air. The Socialist movement was militant and triumphant. We saw nothing but growth and victory ahead of us.

WORLD FACTOR.

And the triumphant march of the Socialist proletariat was by no means confined to the United States along. All over the civilized world, the Socialist movement had become the most significant factor, the most propelling course in public life. In 1913 a number of the leading countries of Europe seemed definitely to move toward Socialism at such a rate of speed that it seemed to all of us that within a few years, a very few years, Socialism would conquer and dominate those countries. The hosts of Socialist men and women in Europe alone numbered between 30 and 40 millions, and it was one great ardent body knitted together by solidarity of feeling and action, inspired by the same idea, working for the same common cause, working as one great universal force of national regardless boundaries, regardless of racial distinctions. We were proud of our International of which we formed a part. We were expecting the next iovful occasion, the great review of Socialist forces of the world which was scheduled to be held in the month of August, 1914, at the proposed International Socialist Congress in Vien-

COLLAPSE COMES.

And then suddenly, unexpectedly, disastrously, the accumulated forces of capitalist misrule broke lose. Europe found itself in the throes of war. Everything that civilization had been laboriously building up in the course of generations collapsed, collapsed suddenly and lamentably, and our proud Socialist Internation-been laboring incessantly at the greatest sacrifice—our International collapsed with every institution of modern civilization.

We are not here, comrades, to judge the conduct of the Socialists and workers of Europe. What elemental force stronger than reason, stronger than principle, stronger even than class loyalty, actuated them in those dark days of the beginning of the war, what force it was that drove this body of workers who only twenty-four hours before had presented one organization, knitted together by the most intimate ties of working class solidarity—what had driven them at each others throats, only history in the future will show.

REACTION REACHES US.

But the fact is that for the time being at least, it tore the proud edifice of the Socialist International to pieces. For the time being International lies wounded and bleeding at the feet of the all-devouring Moloch of militarism and war. It may take years, it may take an indefinite time before we will recover. But there is no doubt whatsoever but that for the time being the war and the participation of Socialists in the war in Europe was a most vital stab in the heart of the International Socialist movement. The reaction spread over the ocean and reached us. It had taken the heart out of a great many of our comrades. It created a moral atmosphere of depression which hung over us like a dark, heavy cloud for years. And then came the even indirect effects of this war as influencing the course of our own movement. War in Europe created that spirit so fatal to all democratic and progressive movementsthe spirit of militarism. founded upon an appeal to the lowest conception of the vulgar patriotism which permeated our country, which was fostered artificially, which grew from day to day to the exclusion practically of all other movements of the people. And with that came this era of prosperity; a prosperity builded upon the death and destruction of our fellowmen in Europe; a prosperity to which our people unthinkingly and unfeelingly were inclined to cling.

HYPOCRITE EXPOSED.

The administration of President Wilson, hypocritical as it turns out now to be, as the Socialists knew it to be all the time, by making an appeal to the unthinking masses, an appeal in behalf of the cause of labor and progress, an appeal -the irony of it all-an appeal to the sentiments of the people in favor of peace, in favor of being kept out of the war.

And with these various discouraging elements came the unfortunate growing laxity in our own organization. It was a fatal blunder, I believe, on our part to abandon those National gatherings which we should normally have had, our National Committee meeting, our convention scheduled for last year, just at the time of all times when most necessary for the welfare of our party, for the gathering of whatever forces there were; so that after the lapse of five years we find ourselves as the Socialist movement in a period of depres-

Comrades, it will serve no good purpose to close our eyes to the fact that our party and our movement have gone backward since 1912. We have lost members. Our membership has been reduced to about 80,-000 from 125,000. We have lost several organs of publicity. We have lost votes in the last election. And worst of all, we have lost some of our spirit, some of our bouyant, enthusiastic, militant spirit which is so very essential, so very vital for the success of any movement like ours. (Applause.)

* * * * WAR IS UPON US.

And now, on top of it all comes this war. Our country, which seemed so very safe from the European insanity 3,000 miles removed from the seat of conflict, our country has been violently, needlessly, criminally drawn into this European conflict. (Great applause.) War is upon us, with all its horrors. It may be that there is time. The vast majority of the unthinking crowds consider our declaration of war a mere manifestation, a mere game. But the time may come, the time probably will come, when war will become as grim, as hideous a reality for the American people as it has become for the peoples of Europe. (Applause.) Millions of our boys will be sent to the trenches to murder millions of other boys in foreign countries, and they will be for the most part boys of the working class on both sides. War means more than a state of mind. War means the horribly mingled bodies of hundreds of thousands of innocent boys. It means the groans, the agonies of the battlefield. It means desolation, privation, suffering at home, and all of it or most of it will fall upon the working class. We, the Socialist Party of the United States, are today the only considerable organized force which has still retained a clear vision, an unclouded mind, in this general din of confusion, passion and unreason; and it falls to us to continue our opposition to this criminal war, even now after it has been declared. (Applause, cries of "Good".)

PEOPLE OPPOSE WAR. The favorite phrase nowadays is, "Stand by our President." We Socialists, so long as we remain Socialists, will never subscribe to so meaningless, so undemocratic a phrase by which the people of the United States surrender their sole birthright. (Great applause.) In his speech before congress, smooth and well turned as usual, President Wilson calls attention to the fact that in the autocracies of Europe this war, the most vital to all the peoples of Europe, was declared by the powers that govern, without consulting the people of the respective countries. And that comes from the mouth of the man who never consulted the American people as such, for the American peoday the vast majority are opposed to this war. (Great applause.) If ever a great people has allowed itself to be stampeded into death and destruction it is this great democratic people of the United States. And we Socialists have a task before us. We have the task, first and foremost, to continue preaching reason and humanity to the people of this country, continuing our opposition to war. And more that that, war having been declared, it becomes our duty and the duty of all progressive, thinking men and women of this country to begin at once laying the foundation of a speedy peace, and one that will make future wars impossible forever and ever. (Applause.)

Nor is that all. War means more than conflicts on the battlefield. War means reaction at home. War creates a mob spirit of unreason. War creates conditions under which all the powers of reaction, all the predatory powers of the country, can satisfy their desires, and accomplish their attacks upon popular liberty, upon popular rights, with absolute impunity. Not a voice in this country will be raised against these attacks upon popular liberty that are sure to come; not a strong voice unless it be the voice of the Socialist Party of the United States. (Applause.)

FIGHT WAR PROFITS.

Nor does this exhaust our task. This war will consume not merely the lives and the blood of the people, but also the wealth of the people, millions and billions of dollars. And as usual, the working class which will furnish the fodder for cannons will also be called upon to furnish the sinews of

It devolves upon us to pro-claim to the working class of this country, to the whole people of this country, that those powers and interests who have made the war, that those powers and interests who can best stand the war, who expect to profit by it. shall be made to bear the tremendous cost of this war. (Applause.) No individual profit shall be made. No individual advantages shall be gained by the predatory classes of our country, out of the misfortunes, out of the calamities, out of the lives of their fellow men; that we, the Socialist Party, can awaken the people of this country to a realization of the enormity of the situa-

Comrades, there are dire days ahead of us. There are critical days ahead of us. Do not be despondent; do not be discouraged; for after all, the Socialist movement never had smooth sailing; for after all, when you men and women gave yourselves to the Socialist movement you must have known that it was a great, a hard, a difficult struggle which you undertook, a struggle which has its ups and downs, its victories, as well as its defeats, its defeats as well as its victories.

There remains but one thing for us, the faith in the ultimate victory, the inevitable victory of our cause

thru all hardships and all difficulties. (Applause.)

FOE NEAR COLLAPSE.

Already we begin to see the signs of the arrival of our movement; the unmistakable signs of the collapse of our inveterate foe, the capitalist system, the great social revolution in Russia was an indication of it. (Applause.) Our short sighted press and our short sighted statesmen may console themselves with the theory that this was a revolution created by the liberal minded Bourgeoisie. We know better. We know that the revolution in Russia was forced on the streets of Petrograd by the working men in uniform and out of uniform, in protest against the horrors of war in Russia. (Applause.)

And what has happened in Russia is bound to happen and bound to happen within a short time, in Germany and Austria as well. (Applause.) Already from all indications, the throne of the Hohenzollerns is tottering. That of the Hapsburgs may follow. This war will be ended not by diplomacy, not around the table by representatives of the powers, monarchies and governments of Europe. This war will be ended by the rebellious working class of Europe. (Applause.) And when the hour comes, comrades, when the proletariat of the world finds itself, when it renews its struggles for liberty, its struggles for social justice, let us see to it that the new movement finds us in a condition where we can proudly take our place in the ranks of the rejuvenated International to continue our struggles for the emancipation of the working class of the world. (Applause.)

TIME OF GREAT TEST.

Comrades, just in these critical times it becomes more than ever our duty to preserve, to strengthen, to build up our organization. It is times like these that and of men. It is easy to go with the Socialist movement when it has almost become fashionable to be a socialist. It is harder to stick to the movement, to give it the best that is in you, at a time when the movement has experienced set-backs, at a time when an artificially infuriated and incited mob has set upon the Socialist movement, at a time when the entire press of the country is up in arms against it. (Applause.) It is at a time like this, comrades, when each true soldier in the Socialist revolution, man and woman, must be at his or her post and stick to it. (Applause.) It is for the purpose, comrades, of gathering our forces, of solidifying our forces; it is for the purpose of organizing a strong, militant, powerful front against all the predatory powers-thatbe, that we have gathered here today. (Applause.)

rades, will make or unmake the Socialist movement in the United States. (Applause.) Let us hope, then, that our deliberations will be conducted with faith, wisdom and courage. Let us remember that a small band of two hundred of us are charged with a tremendous trust, not merely in behalf of our immediate constituents, but in behalf of the entire working class of this country, in behalf, perhaps, of the International working class. SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.—The gold rush for Alaska is on. Dogs are needed to haul the sleds over the northern snows. Buck, king among dogs, is stolen from his home in the Santa Clara Valley, in California, shipped to Seattle, beaten into submission and sold to Perault, agent for the Canadian government. Then he is taken aboard a steamer bound for the Northland. As the boat arrives at its destination, he is brought on deck and experiences his first snow, He is soon put ashore and to work with other dogs where he soon learns the law of club and fang. He is suddenly jerked from the heart of civilization into the heart of things primordial. Life becomes a struggle for life and mastership. The dominant primordial beast gradually asserts itself in Buck and he makes his first kill in a death struggle with Spitz, the leader of the team. Buck is sold several times, finally becoming the property of John Thornton, whose life he saves on two different occasions. He performed another exploit that put his name several notches higher on the totem pole of fame by starting a sled carrying one thousand pound and incidentally winning a $1,000 bet for his owner. Now go on with the story.

Thornton rose to his feet. His eyes were wet. The tears were streaming frankly down his cheeks. 'Sir," he said to the Skookum Bench king, "no, sir. You can go to hell, sir. It's the best I can do for you, sir." Buck seized Thornton's hand mon impulse, the onlookers drew back to a respectful distance; nor were they again indiscreet enough to interrupt.

Being in no haste, Indian fashion, he hunted his dinner in the course of the day' travel; and if he failed to find it, like the Indian, he kept on travelling, secure in the knowledge that sooner or later he would come to it. So, on this great journey into the East, straight meat was the bill of fare, ammunition and tools principally made up the load on the sled, and the time-card was drawn upon the limitless future. To Buck it was boundless delight,

In the fall of the year they penetrated a weird lake country, sad and silent, where wildfowl had been, but where then there was no life nor sign of life—only the blowing of chill winds, the forming of ice in sheltered places, and the melancholy rippling of waves on lonely beaches.

And thru another winter they wandered on the obliterated trails of men who had gone before. Once, they came upon a path blazed thru the forest, an ancient path, and the Lost Cabin seemed very near. But the path began nowhere and ended nowhere. and it remained mystery, as the man who made it and the reason he made it remained mystery. Another time they chanced upon the time-graven wreckage of a hunting lodge, and amid the shreds of rotted blankets John Thornton found a long-barrelled flint-lock. He knew it for a Hudson Bay Company gun of the young days in the Northwest, when such a gun was worth its height in beaver skins packed flat. And that was all - no hint as to the man who in an early day had reared the lodge and left the Men gasped and began to breathe gun among the blankets.

Buck spent long hours musing by the fire. The vision of the short-legged hairy man came to him more frequently, now that there was little work to be done; and often, blinking by the fire, Buck wandered with him in that other world which he remembered.

The salient thing of this other world seemed fear. When he watched the hairy man sleeping by the fire, head between his knees and hands clasped above, Buck saw that he slept restlessly, with many starts and awakenings, at which times he would peer fearfully into the darkness and fling more wood upon the fire. Thru the forest they crept noiselessly, Buck at the hairy man's heels; and they were alert and vigilant, the pair of them, ears twitching and moving and nostrils quivering, for the man heard and smelled as keenly as Buck. The hairy man could spring up into the trees and travel ahead as fast as on the apart, letting go and catching, never falling, never missing his grip. In fact, he seemed as much at home among the trees as on the ground; and Buck had memories of nights of vigil spent beneath trees wherein the as he slept.

for ever a relic of a superstitious past. In the meantime, however, the master classes hit upon a marvelously more efficient method. One that has outclassed all the others beyond compare. This appeal is not backed by the uncertainty of either material or imof the Supreme Court and which gives material reward. It has no offer of the president more power than is posperity or happiness for this world or the one to come. What, you ask, is this appeal which has outstripped all others in its effectiveness. I answer it is the appeal to "Patriotism." What patriot ism is, what it embodies, the average man does not know or care. Certain crude and high-sounding phrases fall with magic meaning upon his ears, "Kultur", "Civilization", 'National honor", "Vital interest", "Sacred rights", "Humanity", etc.—to enlist men to vindicate these things. The larion calls of the patriotic master lasses have gone forth and the response has indeed been unthinkable. No magic under heaven, known among men could have driven men more readily and freely to the standards of their masters and to their doom.

What will be the next step in this process of evolution? I cannot surmise.

Suffice it to say that the present "Call to Arms" has proven the most successful and efficient means that the merciless and mercenary masters by capitalist classes against other have ever devised to entrap and encapitalist classes or nations, we re-slave the mute and misguided mas-

Unique Methods Used By Socialist Police Chief

EDITOR'S NOTE .- Written by Louis Harthill, Chief of Polce of Minneapolis. He is member of the Machinists' Union and of the Socialist Party.

When, on January 1, I assumed the duties of Chief of Police of Minneapolis, a certain class of crime was prevalent in the city. Hardly a week passed that the police were not called on to apprehend some fiend who had on to apprehend some nend who had committed a criminal assault on young school girls. The number of carnal knowledge cases in Minneapolis was appealing. Little girls were afflicted with diseases, and ruined for life; one fourteen-year-old girl had become a mother; two others, scarcely in their teens, were found in a disorderly house.

One of the first things I decided must be accomplished was to secure hetter cooperation between the police department and the citizens of Min-

To properly police and safeguard the interests of a city of the size of Minneapolis to me means not merely to apply the iron hand of the law which means to make arrests and bring about convictions of those who have become a menace to the public, but to throw the cloak of protection around the public, especially the children thruout the entire city, and to do those things that prevent people committing crime as well as to arrest those who have committed crime.

In fact, to me the use of the police department in applying the big human side of this question is of great importance because to save one girl from falling is of greater value than arresting twenty who have already fallen. As soon as I took office, I started to make an investigation, not only as to the class of crimes being committed in the city, but as to the reasons and causes which led people to commit these crimes, and I found upon personal investigation and by personal cross questioning that a very personal cross questioning that a very large portion of carnal knowledge cases and assaults on little children were made possible on account of children being afraid of the police.

I then talked to the older boys and girls instructing the older girls not to take any automobile rides without the consent of their parents or teachers, and that when men drove up to the curb and invited them not to accept a ride, to take the number of their machine and refer the matter to the police department. That they should not accept gifts or money and should at all times advise with parents or their teachers. I tell them that as they get older they will un-derstand why I am carrying on this campaign.

The older boys I advised to stay away from pool halls where they learn to smoke cigarettes and where they find associates who are not the best and will eventually lead them into doing acts that will bring them into contact with the police department and also eventually lead them into being "dope" fiends.

While it is true that this campaign is unique and has never been carried on in any city of the Urited States, to my knowledge, still I feel that it is a campaign that is absolutely necessary, for we are not accepting the traditions of the past, but introducing into the department our ideas and ideals that we believe will give the city of Minenapolis the best police department in the United States.

Do you suppose that outsiders can have respect for persons whose ideas have apparently failed with the members of their is not such a difficult one to solve if Socialist parents would but think seriously of their children's and their party's welfare.

The older Socialists have much to learn that is practical from the Catholic Church and the capitalist political parties. If the details of these organizations are looked into carefully, it is noted that the social feature stands out conspicuously. The old and the young are led to become intensively interested even in the bulk of a politic al party because of the big social element involved. The young develop into first voters very quickly. Politicians may be uncouth and ofttimes uneducated, but they are astute judges of human nature; they are naturalborn psychologists. They know the value of appealing to the young, of gaining their good favor and of hold-ing on to them. Results indicate that Socialists appear to be mere novices in the game, even so far as their own children are concerned (Chorus) children are concerned.

Small children should attend Socialist Sunday schools; larger ones of adolescent age should become members of the Young People's Socialist

The Young People's Socialist leagues are doing well, thank you. Can they do better? Yes, my good Comrades, much better. ASHINGTON.—The entrance of the United States into the war is about to bring on an unparalleled fo od situation.

In ordinary these are about to bring on an unparalleled fo od situation. In ordinary times we produce more than enough food to supply our own wants and the needs of the export trade. But these are not ordinary times. Vast millions of the world's producers have been drawn into the armies, and the harvests of the world are short.

The world wheat is about 80 per cent of what it should be. The world sugar cane crop this year is about 70 per cent of what it

This time the cry of the stimulators of production is no joke. We need more food, and part of the need is the lack of food, not only the faulty

With their strength in the city council increased from two to three aldermen, with the movement considerably strengthened, and with increasing enthusiasm, the Chicago Socialists are going ahead in their fight to build up a bigger and stronger organization to win new victories in the future.

IN SHEBOYGAN, WISCONSIN Sheboygan Socialists re-elected all their former city officials and elected school commissioner and one member of the water commission. The aldermen elected are: Joseph Baumgart-ner, Fourth ward; J. Meyer, Sixth ward; J. De Zwarte, Seventh ward; and William Brockman, Eighth ward.

ARREST AND FINE TWO FOR SEEKING DOWNFALL OF WAR

Kenosha, Wis.-Two members of the Socialist party were arrested and fined $7 each for distributing the national Socialist leaflet entitled, "Down

With War."

Martin Schmidt, Socialist, was elected school commissioner from the Seventh ward, giving the party three members of the school board. W. F. Goodman, Socialist was defeated for alderman by 27 votes. The party has one holdover alderman.

CATHOLIC WOMEN FACTOR IN MIWAUKEE SCHOOL ELECTION Milwaukee, Wis.—Thru the com-bined influence of the combined capitalistic press, big business and the Catholic church, the Socialist candidates for school directors and judges were defeated in the recent spring elections.

The total vote for school directors was approximately 38,000 in comparison with 35,000 two years ago. The increase is believed to be due largely to votes of Catholic women. The political complexion of the school board remains practically unchanged. The five Socialist directors hold over, the term of one expiring in 1919 and of the other four in 1921.
